Going beyond compliance to systematically eliminate modern slavery

50 million

people around the world are in slavery today*, yet...

*Global Estimates of Modern Slavery Forced Labour and Forced Marriage Report, International Labour Organisation, 2021

One in three

Australians (29%) are aware of the extent of modern slavery.

Slavery is a top priority for Australians, with young people leading the charge:

Ending Slavery (% who say it is priority number 1)

Climate Change (% who say it is priority number 1)

Age	Ending Slavery	Climate Change
18-24	48%	23%
25-34	33%	30%
35-44	30%	30%
45-54	29%	30%
55-64	33%	29%
65+	34%	25%

Australians' spending habits are driven by their beliefs of Australians would not buy a product if they knew it was made by a slave.

87%

Two in three

Australians (65%) would pay more for a product if it was certified 'slave free'.

To Achieve

All stakeholders effectively playing their part in the systematic elimination of modern slavery.

Australians expect Government and businesses to champion the abolition of slavery

Government and businesses have a duty to protect human rights and the basic fundamental freedoms of all.

This happens best when Government and businesses go beyond basic compliance requirements and take a pro-active stance in the global effort to eliminate modern slavery.

92% believe it is the responsibility of a business to know if their products are produced by slaves

86% believe it is the role of Government to step in and ensure that businesses are aware of any forms of slavery occurring in their supply chain

82% believe businesses should be required to label their products as slave-free or slave-made

How we can help you
